Yes, you can't ignore Microsoft's new operating system, and even though there are many similarities between 8 and Windows 7, the two are not identical. With that in mind, we're going to take a look at some of the best Windows 8 apps available for your digital lifestyle. First, we'll be taking a look at some of the Windows 8 apps that are shared between both platforms. From there, we'll look at the Windows 8 apps that are exclusive to the Windows 8 platform. So, if you're a Windows 7 user, it is worth noting that there are no Windows 8 apps listed in this article. Windows 8 shares many of the same apps with Windows 7, with the biggest difference being the lack of a start menu. Instead, Windows 8 users have an apps screen which contains an 'app bar' at the top, with icons which represent the apps or programs currently being used. However, Windows 8 was not designed with a start menu in mind

Each time you create a new playlist, for example, it's added as a new track. The director of the Department of Justice's (DOJ) Civil Rights Division, who is a nominee to lead the attorney general's office, has come under intense scrutiny over what critics say are his overtly hostile views of the department. Those concerns intensified when news broke recently that Daniel J. Leff, nominated to replace outgoing Assistant Attorney General Tom Perez, criticized the DOJ Civil Rights Division and its staff during a 2014 speech to the Texas A&M University's School of Law. In the speech, Leff denounced the "frivolous" prosecution of mortgage fraud and the DOJ Civil Rights Division's abysmal record in pursuing the country's systematic discrimination problems, according to Newsmax. Leff also attacked the DOJ Civil Rights Division for being the primary force behind the Obama administration's targeting of conservative political groups such as the Sierra Club and National Organization for Marriage in 2010 and 2012. Leff went on to say that the DOJ would "not take a position" when it came to issues related to LGBT equality and affirmative action, Breitbart reported. "They will not prosecute frivolous civil rights cases, whether it's racial discrimination or gender discrimination or LGBT discrimination," Leff reportedly said. In light of Leff's comments, former Justice Department official Jerry Markon, writing for National Review, called Leff "one of the most notorious foes of gay rights and the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission." "In a 2002 hearing he made clear that his primary objective was to roll back protections for LGBT people and dismantle the EEOC," Markon said. Leff also has a history of harsh criticism of the Freedom of Access to Clinic Entrances Act (FACE), which was signed into law by President Bill Clinton in 1994. The law was passed to protect reproductive rights clinics, but was used against individuals who would protest outside those same clinics. In the speech, Leff blamed liberal activists for distorting reality when they blame the DOJ's record of defending public interest laws for committing discriminatory acts. "Saying, for example, that the division
